

Quantum probability is an old topic, closely related to the more general notion of noncommutative probability. Motivated by recent advances in the study of high dimensional statistical and quantum systems we survey some ideas and recent results in the field, featuring the role of free probability and its algebraic and combinatorial structure.

---